The Changing Face(s) of WAAS

Recently an alumnus visited, a leader who has known the WAAS campus since he was first a student in the 1980s. He summed up his observation of the developments on campus with the remark, “Ah, the changing face of WAAS!”

Familiar Faces, New Faces

The faces on campus continually change. Students from ten nations have just completed the 2016 Master of Arts session. Some 170 students from 17 countries arrive soon for the undergraduate semester. Among them will be new faces as third-year students from eight extension centers—from Senegal to Madagascar—come to complete their studies on the Lomé campus. Photos of the MA session: <http://bit.ly/1Wt39XY>.

Building Facelifts

Buildings are changing to meet the needs that growth brings. The new kitchen is nearly done and the veranda is being enclosed to serve as a dining hall. Photos: <http://bit.ly/1VYmdxe>.

The two new floors of the multipurpose building (former library) are taking shape. The first contains offices, classrooms, etc., for PATHS' doctoral program; the second, rooms for professors. Photos: <http://bit.ly/2a8aY38>.

Faces from Other Places

A team from Springfield, MO, USA, is working to catalog some 30,000 books and journals donated to the library through Africa's Hope. Photos: <http://bit.ly/2a1aND5>.

PATHS' Greek course brings students and teachers here from Ethiopia, Malawi, Kenya, and the US as well as from the nations WAAS serves.

Extension Center News

The first five students from the MA extension in Kinshasa have completed their coursework on the Lomé campus. Lord willing, BTh students are coming from the centers in Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, Kinshasa, Madagascar, Senegal, and Sierra Leone.
